Members of the jury have selected ASIT biotech from the 3 companies that were shortlisted from 40 businesses who received sufficient nominations to be considered as having implemented high governance standards as a tool for success. ASIT has demonstrated its ability to adapt its governance to the needs and evolutions of the company in ensuring the right balance between business and academics as well as the executives/non-executive balance.

Thierry Legon, CEO of ASIT biotech, said: “We are honored to have been received the Best Biopharmaceutical Corporate Governance Belgium 2018 Award as it reflects our involvement in structuring and evolving our governance. We are convinced that diversity is an essential value within the company and we are determined to giving as much focus on our corporate governance as on the development of our products to benefit patients across the world. In line with this focus, we carried out an independent evaluation to further strengthen our governance as we continue the advancement of our immunotherapy products towards the market.”
